Course Description:
This course focuses upon the nature and influence of communicative behavior in close, personal relationships. Interpersonal communication structure and processes will be explored as they relate to the development and maintenance of identities, friendships, romantic, and family relationships.

Course Objectives:
Through thorough examination and discussion of theoretical study and practice of communication exercises, at the end of this course, each participant should:
1. Establish effective interpersonal, intrapersonal, and group communication
2. Know the techniques for improvement of communication skills
3. Be able to assess his/her communication skills
4. Become aware of barriers to effective communication
5. Be aware of different perceptions and possibilities for interpretation of communication
6. Learn and apply The 7 Decisions

Workbooks must be purchased new.
Used workbooks will not be acceptable for this course.
You must have your workbook with you for every class meeting!

Course Activities:
To meet the stated objectives, prior to class, students will complete the assigned activities from the text. Students will utilize class time to further discuss the assignments, interact and communicate with each other in large and small groups. The workbooks will be handed in for instructor review and feedback at the end of the course.

IMPORTANT NOTE: New regulations under the Higher Education Act require us to verify the identity of a person doing work in a class if we receive assignments, etc. from that student electronically. We can comply with this regulation if our students submit things to teachers electronically from their Doane College e-mail address or through Blackboard, because the college issued that address, ID, and password. For that reason, I can only send assignments to your Doane e-mail address, and I can only accept assignments submitted to me from your Doane e-mail address.
