Course Description

This course is the study of fiction that is international in scope and spans nearly two centuries. The stories themselves are widely diversified as to type and style and offer attractions to a multiplicity of tastes and interests. They also provide the opportunity to selective approaches organized around related themes. All of the stories, by women and men, were selected for their literary merit. All reading for each session must be done prior to class.

Course Objectives

Students will have the opportunity ---

- to foster an appreciation or reading and a serious study of literature,
- to learn and distinguish the elements of fiction,
- to use interpretive skills in regard to literature and life experiences.
- to improve writing skills.

General Focus

All reading for each session must be done prior to class.

The works for this course are selected to introduce the student to serious study of literature. The fiction read will be experienced through three logical sequences. The actual reading of the work will be the obvious beginning. Then, the purpose and nature of the fiction will be analyzed by questions of craft, the so-called elements of fiction. Lastly, each author’s life will also be explored to help foster ways of seeing the works within their temporal and cultural contexts. The reading of the fiction may ultimately continue to the way we understand and experience our own lives.

I. Author Talks (8 minutes in length) DO NOT READ TO US, as this will lower the presentation evaluation by one letter grade. Each student is required to select an author from the reading list and present a 10-minute review about the author prior to discussing their work. (Seminar students have the option of writing a paper.)
   * Choose any author from the assigned reading list.
   * Only one author talk about any given author per class section.
   * The author talk will be given verbally before the class on the assigned date.
   * Provide a fact sheet for everyone in the class. One page only.
   * Cite your resources in correct MLA format or points will be deducted for plagiarism.
   * Use at least three different sources.
* Do not include a list of their works. This appears to be “filler.” Rather, touch on their major work.

* Make reference to the class selection in regard to discoveries made about the author.

* Include such things as the following:
  - where they were born
  - family
  - major works
  - formal education
  - cause of death
  - marriages
  - prizes received for work
  - other interesting trivia

* Please avoid copying chronologies from the first pages of biographies.

DO NOT SIMPLY CUT AND PASTE FROM ELECTRONIC SOURCES.

• YOU MAY USE NOTES; HOWEVER, SIMPLY READING TO THE CLASS FROM YOUR HANDOUT OR INTERNET PRINTOUTS RESULTS IN POINTS BEING DEDUCTED FROM THE PRESENTATION

• SEMINAR STUDENTS HAVE THE OPTION OF WRITING A 5-8 PAGE CITED PAPER WITH A WORKS CITED PAGE.

• PLAGARISM IN ANY FORM WILL BE GIVEN A FAILING GRADE. TAKING ANOTHER’S THOUGHTS, IDEAS, OR INFORMATION IS A CRIME. GO AHEAD AND USE IT, BUT IT MUST BE CITED.

• Scoring for Author Talks:
  - 8 min. = 100%
  - 7.5 min. = 95%
  - 7 min. = 90%

  - 3 min. = 50%
  - 3 min. = 45%
  - 3 min. = Why bother?

II. Reading Quizzes

All reading for each session must be done prior to class.

Questions will be asked about each story at the beginning of each session in a written format. These will not be interpretive level questions, but rather “Did you read it?” type questions.

One quiz each session: 192 points (6 points each story). NO QUIZ WILL BE TAKEN OR CREDIT GIVEN IF THE STUDENT DOES NOT STAY TO THE COMPLETION OF THE CLASS; YOU CAN NOT COME TO CLASS, TAKE THE QUIZ, AND LEAVE EARLY.
III.  Exam:  200 points

THIS IS A W (WRITING) CLASS

• One 100-point essay, typewritten, double-spaced
• Essay due one week after last class
• No late work accepted because grades are due immediately.
